

U.S. Animal Industries Pose Disease Risks to People, Report Says

1688756520

1688756520

The United States is home to an enormous array of animal industries - including industrial agriculture, fur farming and the exotic pet trade - that pose a significant risk of creating infectious disease outbreaks in humans, according to a new report by experts at Harvard Law School and New York University.