

What happens when HIV becomes a crime

1688975880

1688975880

LONDON - James' life was irrevocably changed the day his name, photo, address and place of work were plastered on a news website beneath the accusation that he was being charged with infecting his former partner with HIV. It wasn't the start of the living nightmare he found himself in - that had begun two years earlier when the police in England interviewed James following an allegation being made against him by his former partner. Nor was it the end.